My Facebook Group with God, Jesus and the Holy Spirit

acebook—it can suck you in, spending hours in voyeurism taking you into people's lives that you don't know or have never met because they're "friends of a friend" or "a friends mother-in-law". Don't get me wrong, Facebook can be a brilliant tool to stay connected. For years I worked with the Deaf community and as "people of the eye" it is wonderful. However, do we ever share what our "normal" life is like on a day to day basis; very rarely. It is usually the cool, interesting things that give us as many likes as possible which pump dopamine into our blood stream becoming addictive (actual known fact, by the way).

So, it got me thinking this morning. What if my Facebook friends were just God, Jesus and the Holy Spirit? What would my newsfeed look like? What would they be sharing with me and I with them?

Would we really care about what Trump said or didn't say? Or, what exercise, food or sleep we should be doing to be more successful?

I hope it would be a newsfeed filled with what life would've been like for Enoch who just walked with God. Or Joshua who stayed behind in the tent after Moses left just to hang out with God. Filled with loving the Lord with all my heart, all my soul and all my strength and really loving my neighbour like I love myself. That's worth getting sucked into.
